

30 & 31 October 2018

Birmingham

Launching Professor John Bolton's new paper on best practice in outcome based care, this event will explore with delegates what outcomes are and how do we keep our processes, commissioning and services focused on them?

IPC's ongoing work on outcomes will be shared, together with a range of experiences and perspectives from guest speakers. We will discuss the barriers to outcome based adult social care and how to overcome challenges, from culture and behaviours, to technology and aligning processes. The agenda will include:

- Who's doing what, where and how in the world of outcomes with Prof John Bolton
- Market Shaping for Outcomes with Isle of Wight Council
- Piloting different approaches to outcome focussed care with First City Nursing & Swindon Borough Council
- What role does CQC play in encouraging outcome based social care? Dave James, Head of Adult Social Care Policy, CQC

Similar to our previous events (see below), we will draw on participants experiences and learning in this area through short "show and tell" presentations, focused discussions and informal networking.

May 2018 IPC Partnership Conference considered “The art of the possible: enabling good lives AND managing demand

The ‘involved’ style of the event made it fun and increase significantly the learning

It was all really useful ... really relevant to my work

Great two days, learnt some new things and has helped me plan my next steps.

Helped me look at the commissioning function in a different way!

Loved the action learning sessions, who knew that the answer was always out there - thanks to IPC and other delegates for making this a really useful event!

Commissioners and providers from over 25 different IPC Partner and Network members joined us to consider how it’s possible to enable people to lead good lives within their communities and better manage overall demand and resources. IPC’s ongoing work on ‘Commissioning for an Ordinary Life’ will be built upon to explore how we can commission for communities and change the behaviour of both individuals and professionals.

We welcomed guest speakers Laura Willoughby OBE, Co-Founder of Club Soda, and Sian Lockwood, CEO of Community Catalysts to help us address the key themes of good commissioning for good lives, working with providers and market shaping, changing behaviours and expectations and evidencing what works.

To reserve your place, please complete our online booking form or for further information please contact ipcevents@brookes.ac.uk

To find out how the IPC Partnership Network programmes can provide longer term support to help your team or organisation deliver improvements in public care please contact Philip Provenzano at pprovenzano@brookes.ac.uk. IPC Partners are entitled to free and discounted places to attend this event (which includes accommodation for the night of 30th October).

Non IPC Partner or Network members will be charged £225.