Mike has worked in the public sector for over thirty years and has a wide range of operational, management and leadership experience in social care. Key strengths include tenacity and engagement with a clear and demonstrable commitment to quality, a positive experience for service users and to high levels of staff and volunteer support. He is a highly experienced coach and trainer covering a wide range of topics including service user involvement and partnership working, diversity, child and adult protection, leadership and management.

Mike has many years experience of policy development and campaigning within a Welsh, UK and European context. His work focuses on a broad range of issues using a range of training, mentoring and coaching approaches. He works in English or Welsh and is 100% committed to working in the public sector and bringing energy and passion to all that he does.

Mike started his career as a Social Worker in Glamorgan, carrying a complex case-load which focused on child protection and children and young people who were looked after. NCH Action for Children was his first management post where he was responsible for setting up a new family centre, establishing the staff team and supporting its geographical growth and the provision of additional services.

Since 2013 Mike works as a freelance facilitator, a part time Lecturer in Social Work for Cardiff University and Associate Consultant for IPC. Prior to that he was the Chief Executive Officer of the Welsh Refugee Council, responsible for resource management, external relationships, good governance, fund-raising and strategic development. His current work focusses upon social care reform, migration, positive psychology of ageing and change management.

Mike is a registered social worker and has a BSc in Psychology from Cardiff University. He also has an MA in Social Policy and Criminology and an MSc in Research Methods.
