What is a Market Position Statement?

Newcastle City Council aspires to be a cooperative council; this means we want to:
- Deliver services in cooperation with communities,
- Enable communities to inform choices about the Council’s priorities,
- Involve communities in deciding how services can be delivered in the future and how to achieve a balance between those services which are available to everyone and those that are for people with an assessed social care need.

Market Position Statements are the first step towards achieving a cooperative approach to the commissioning of services. These documents are designed to help Adult Social Care providers and the people who use Adult Social Care services in Newcastle understand what services are currently on offer in the City, and also what we think Adult Social Care services should look like in the future.

We are producing a range of these documents looking at different client groups and service models in the City.

In developing these documents we have spoken to people that use Social Care services, the people that work in services and the organisations that run them to understand what they think of what’s currently on offer and how they would like to see it change.

We want to use these documents as the start of a conversation with providers, carers and people who use services, about the vision for the future of our Social Care market in Newcastle.

For our information and advice duties, we will need to have an ‘information and advice strategy’ – the conversation that results from this document will go towards shaping this strategy.

In conjunction with this document we have drafted a protocol for advocacy services in Newcastle, which outlines the purpose advocacy, the advocates role and mandatory requirements for providing an advocate.

What is driving change?

The Care Act 2014 is driving change. This says the Council must:

- establish and maintain an information and advice service which relates to care and support for all people living in Newcastle.
- establish an information and advice strategy – the formulation of this MPS is the first stage towards this strategy, which we are aiming to be ready for September 2015.
- provide independent advocacy for people in certain circumstances.
Who is it for?

This document is aimed at:

- Existing and potential providers of information and advice services.
- Service users and carers to understand the direction of travel in Newcastle.
- Health colleagues who will be crucial partners in ensuring the delivery of the co-operative approach which is fundamental to Newcastle City Council’s approach.
- Voluntary and community organisations can learn about future opportunities and what would enable them to build on their knowledge of local needs in order to develop new activities and services.
- Existing and potential providers of advocacy services, to aid them in their future business plans.

Key Messages

Population statistics for Newcastle

Based on the latest ONS population estimates (2013) there are approximately 286,800 people currently living in Newcastle. The population is estimated to grow steadily to around 299,400 by 2030 and to 305,100 by 2037 - a 5.7% growth over the next 17 years to 2030.

- People aged over 85 years and over who cannot manage one activity will increase 67% up to 2030 (2,615 to 3,890) – an extra 1,275 people.
- People aged 85 years and over with a limiting long term illness will increase by 66% up to 2030 (4,048 to 6,141) – an extra 2,093 people.
Key Statistics

- 81.7% of Newcastle’s population (230,000 people) are White British and a further 3.7% are White Other.
- 14.7% (40,600 people) are non-white (compared with 6.9% in Census 2001).
- We need to ensure our information and advice, and advocacy service is accessible to the whole population.

The 2011 Census suggests that in Newcastle:

- 89.7% of households (where all people aged 16 and over) have English as a main language
- 5.9% of households have no people who have English as their main language, equivalent to 6,927 households

Long-term health problem or disability
This table shows the number and proportion of people with a long-term health problem or disability. As would be expected the proportion of people with limited health or disability issues increases with age.

• 73% predicted increase in adults aged over 65 with a visual impairment by 2030.
• We need to ensure that we address specific information and advice needs of older people.
• 78% predicted increase in Adults with a hearing impairment by 2030.
• 73% predicted increase in Adults with a profound hearing impairment by 2030.
• Numbers of carers aged over 85 years of age will increase by 50% over the next 15 years.

Learning disability

Error! Reference source not found. This illustrates the number of adults predicted to have a learning disability.
• In 2014, 4,655 people aged 18-64 years were predicted to have a learning disability.
• The trend is expected to remain similar to 2030 (4,632 people).
• For those aged 65 and over, the numbers are predicted to increase from 852 in 2014 to 942 in 2020 to 1,157 by 2030.

Adults with a physical disability (aged 18-64)
• In 2014, 13,248 people were expected to have a moderate physical disability and 3,708 people a serious disability.
• Over time, predicted trends vary slightly with 13,383 people in 2020 and 13,118 people in 2030 expected to have a moderate disability.
• The number of people with a serious disability is predicted to be 3,797 people in 2020 and 3,710 people in 2030.

Care Act 2014

England’s care and support system is changing from 1st April 2015. The Care Act will make care and support more consistent across the country. Anyone who receives care and support, or supports someone as a carer, could benefit from the changes as any decisions about care and support will take into consideration people’s mental, physical and emotional wellbeing, with a focus on supporting people to stay healthy and remain independent for longer
Sensory impairment

The number of people aged 65 and over predicted to have a moderate or severe visual impairment in 2014 was 3,666 (people aged over 75 years account for two thirds of these overall). The numbers are predicted to increase, to almost 4,000 by 2020 and 5,000 by 2030.

These figures are based on a prevalence rate of all causes of moderate or severe visual impairment in those aged 65-74 of 5.6%. We are grateful to the Newcastle Society for Blind People for their feedback which indicates that RNIB data suggests higher number of people may be ‘living with sight loss’ (5549 for 2014).

The number of adults aged 18 to 64 predicted to have a serious visual impairment is predicted to remain at around 121/122 people over the next 15 years to 2030.

In 2014, there were a total of 23,735 people, aged over 18 years predicted to have a moderate or severe hearing impairment. This figure is expected to increase to 25,532 by 2020 and to 30,352 by 2030.

In 2014, there were around 520 people aged 18 and over predicted to have a profound hearing impairment. The trend is predicted to increase to 581 people by 2020 and 708 people by 2030 with just over half of these being 85 and over.

Carers

Census 2011 data suggests almost one in ten (9.2%) of people provide some kind of unpaid care in Newcastle. (approximately 26,000 carers).

Predicted trends produced on the Projecting Older People Population Information System (POPPI) using the Census 2011 figures as the baseline, suggest the number of older people who provide unpaid care will increase by a third over the next 15 years (and those aged 85 and over are predicted to increase by 50%).

Information and Advice Duties

The Care Act places specific new duties on local authorities in relation to the provision of information
The government sees good quality information and advice as being fundamental to enabling adults and their carers to make well-informed choices about care and support. It is also a vital component in promoting wellbeing and preventing or delaying need for care and support.

The information and advice offer must provide information to meet the needs of all the population, including, not just those who are currently in receipt of services, but those who might want to take action to prevent needs developing, or to plan ahead for costs of care and support.

The local authority is not expected to provide all elements of the service, but to 'understand, co-ordinate and make effective use of other high quality statutory, voluntary and/or private sector information and advice resources'. The local authority is expected to 'take a role in joining up information and advice organisations locally so they can work collaboratively.'

The information and advice offer must be accessible, with information and advice open to anyone who would benefit from it. Staff should be appropriately trained to address accessibility issues. Due regard must be given to the needs of those with particular communication needs, including sensory impairment, those who have English as a second language, those who are socially isolated, and those with a disability or mental health problem.

However, the information provided should go beyond care and support, and should include:

- Housing information and advice
- Information about effective treatment and support for health conditions
- Benefits advice
- Availability of carers’ services and benefits
- Information on Lasting Power of Attorney, becoming a deputy, and the Court of Protection
- Raising awareness of the need to plan for future care costs
- Transition from children’s social care

Information and advice - What’s happening in Newcastle

We recognise that Newcastle already has a range of organisations providing a network information and advice to the public on many of these issues. We would like to start a conversation about how adult social care and information and advice providers can work together to ensure there is a comprehensive and integrated information and advice offer. It is unlikely that each individual provider would wish to cover all the above topics, but it is important that the service as a whole can pull together to create the offer, and that providers are able to understand each other’s roles and work together effectively.

Newcastle already has a very effective Advice Compact, which works to ensure consistent communication, standards and advice among agencies, in relation to benefits and debt advice (see appendix). We anticipate that any new arrangement would work alongside and complement the Compact.

In addition, we have broken the rest of the required content down into smaller areas and indicated some of the main providers currently working in those areas:

We support a number of Voluntary and Community Sector organisations to provide services through a variety of funding streams, including the Newcastle Fund. Many of these services support people with lower levels of need and help in preventing needs escalating further, resulting in a reduced demand for statutory services.

Information and advice - what this means for providers

We are asking information and advice providers to start to think about how they can work together with Newcastle City Council to start to provide the specific information and advice that the Care Act requires.

Information and advice - what do providers say?

Table discussions were held at a Newcastle CVS event on 4th March 2015.

Key points from this session included:
Recognition of the benefits of electronic information – including the ability to make suggestions and link to other organisations’ information; the ability to keep information up to date and relevant. This also gives useful data to inform future planning and identify gaps. Digital inclusion opportunities were valued. However, there was also caution about over-reliance on technology, in particular for older people. It remains important to have a range of different channels of communication.

It was also felt that it was important to distinguish between ‘information’ and ‘advice’ and the different means of communication required to deliver these two.

There were a number of comments about the importance of alternative routes and approaches to social care information provision, including using GPs, faith groups and other trusted sources of information such as care workers. There is a sense in which individuals are wary of the council and social workers, and other sources of information are valued.

The need to refer and signpost appropriately across organisation, also the difference between referrals and signposting, and the additional responsibilities inherent within referrals, were all highlighted as issues.

What do people who use services, and their carers say about information and advice?

We have spoken to some service user groups, and a wide range of views were expressed. Some of the key points to come out of this work are:

- Website information is increasingly important for some people, but will never be accessed by others – so information and advice needs to be available via other channels.
- Information needs to be consistent across different organisations.
- People don’t always know what questions to ask in a particular situation.
- Organisations shouldn’t assume that people have any knowledge at all of how the care and support system works.
- People won’t necessarily seek advice proactively – they might only ask for help as they come to a crisis, so the service needs to be set up to give urgent advice.

What do people who use services, and their carers say about information and advice?
Several providers of information and advice services, and other interested parties, provided feedback on the draft MPS, between April and mid-May. We appreciate all the submissions, which offered constructive and positive suggestions. In some cases we have responded directly to particular queries or points.

There was a range of comments on the table of advice providers (page 9 in the ‘What’s happening in Newcastle’ section). As a result of these comments, we have clarified the remit of some providers and added some additional providers. Please note this table was not intended to provide a comprehensive map of services, merely to identify some of the main providers whose primary role is the provision of information and advice.

Several of the submissions pointed out the value of either the Information Now website or the broader Information in the City partnership, and its potential as a core resource.

A number of comments acknowledged the value of the existing advice compact, which primarily focuses on financial inclusion. It was suggested that this might offer a model for Care Act information and advice.

Two submissions noted the challenges of a range of different organisations working together, in particular, in ensuring that each understands the remit of the others. It may be that meetings, workshops or other events can facilitate improved understanding of other organisations’ role this. It may also be necessary to look at how to signpost or refer between organisations.

One submission highlighted the need to ensure a focus on ‘real’ opportunities and benefits which may be available. This seemed to be suggesting that advice providers should be upfront with regard to issues of eligibility and say at an early stage if a person is unlikely to receive assistance.

A number of suggestions were made in relation to general awareness raising of the services’ existence:
- e-bulletin
- Elders Council newsletter
- Information days / events
- Working with frontline staff

Accessibility issues were raised as part of the consultation, in particular in relation to those with visual impairments. This will need to be considered as part of the ongoing discussion.

Newcastle Law Centre made some points about the impact of legal aid cuts on the ability of individuals to seek specialist legal advice. While we acknowledge these concerns, we feel that they are outside the remit of this consultation, which relates specifically to Care Act information and advice.
Next steps

Based on the feedback provided, we have arrived at a view with regard to the development of a Care Act compliant information and advice offer. We intend to establish a framework which describes levels of social care information and advice provision, and the expected service provision at each level. This will be based on the three-tier ‘spectrum of advice’ model developed by Active Inclusion Newcastle in relation to financial inclusion, but will cover key areas of Care Act information and advice described above. The framework will encompass the whole range of information and advice provision, from digital information to more traditional face to face information and advice provision.

We will approach information and advice providers to discuss their provision and understand what level of service they provide. We will also identify what level of support we need to make available to providers. It is anticipated that this initial piece of work will take place during 2015–16. In the longer term resources will be put in place to ensure that the work can be maintained and developed.

Advocacy Duties

“Advocacy is taking action to help people say what they want, secure their rights, represent their interests and obtain services they need. Advocates and advocacy Contractors work in partnership with the people they support to promote social inclusion, equality, and social justice.”

A Code of Practice for Advocates, revised edition 2014

There are statutory obligations placed on local authorities to provide independent advocates in certain circumstances and eligibility to enable an individual to have their voice heard and represented. These are:

- Independent advocacy under the Care Act 2014;
- Independent Mental Capacity Advocates (IMCAs) under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 including the Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS);
- Relevant Person’s Representative (RPR) which is covered in the Mental Capacity (Deprivation of Liberty: Appointment of Relevant Person’s Representative) Regulations 2008; and
- Independent Mental Health Advocacy (IMHAs) under the Mental Health Act 1983, as amended 2007.

Independent Advocacy

The Care Act says we must provide independent advocacy for people who are having difficulty ‘engaging’ in any processes connected with the care act and have no ‘suitable person’ to help them.
The government’s aim in reforming the law is to support equality of access, and ensure that all people can be fully involved in the key processes to which their input is essential.

We complete an average of 9,312 Social Care assessments and reviews per year, and there are around 600 Safeguarding Adults cases per year. It is likely that this will increase with the Care Act changes, in particular with the expansion of the Council’s duties around carer’s assessments.

Future Advocacy Provision

At the moment, several organisations provide advocacy support across the City. We do not think this is the best use of resources or the best service we can offer people as it may mean that they have more than one advocate supporting them. People have told us that they want to talk to the same person where possible and that they do not like repeating their story. We also worked with providers, discussing our initial thoughts about what an advocacy service could look like.

We listened to what both people and providers were telling us, shaping the service to reflect their suggestions, and are now in the process of tendering for a new advocacy service across the City which will be delivered either by one provider, or a group of providers working together in partnership.

The new service isn’t the end of the story. We want to keep checking with people to make sure the service is meeting their needs. We also want to make sure that people and providers know how to find the right information and advice to help them make decisions which is why we have linked these needs together.

What business development opportunities will this create?

The inclusion of independent advocacy in the Care Act is a new requirement for local authorities and provides a new opportunity in the market.

What do people who use services, and their carers say about the new advocacy service?

There was a recommendation that advocates have the relevant training and experience when dealing with people with specific health conditions. We agree this is important, and built this requirement into the tender process.

What do advocacy providers say about the new advocacy service?

One submission suggested an umbrella of partners working to consistent standards to provide a wider expertise base than that of a single provider, and would like to be considered as a partner in providing advocacy where it relates to the impact of a person’s visual impairment.

One provider commented that although the Independent Advocacy Service offer will cover IMCA, IMHA, RPR and Care Act Advocacy, which is all statutory provision that will bring benefits to specific groups of people in a very specific set of circumstances, there remains a need for non-statutory advocacy provision within the city for a broad range of vulnerable groups in a much broader set of circumstances.

They have suggested that although a more generic offer of advocacy support might be useful it should be balanced with the need for the kind of specialist knowledge and skills that different groups of people might require, for example, the skills and resources to work with people who have a significant learning disability, those who have dementia, or, those with different communication needs.

How Newcastle Council will help providers be fit for the future

We will do our best to play our part in helping to develop the market by:

- Monitoring the use of advocacy under the Care Act across the City;
- Identify any gaps in provision that could be better met by different arrangements;
- Engage with stakeholders in the market on the provision of advocacy services to investigate options for future arrangements.

The tender opportunity for Independent Advocacy Services was published via NEPO (https://www.qtegov.com) on Monday 23rd March and closed on Monday 27th April. To provide advance detail of the tender opportunity a supplier engagement event was held on Friday 27th February, which was advertised via NEPO and through the voluntary communication network.

Newcastle Advice Compact

Newcastle’s partnership approach to financial inclusion is based on providing information, advice and support to help people understand and manage their finances. We aim to better understand the pressures people face so that we can develop effective responses to improve residents’ quality of life.

To help us achieve our aims we have focused activity around five objectives that focus on limiting the effects of poverty and supporting those who experience it:

1. Maximise income and respond to welfare reform
2. Support residents to manage their money and promote access to independent debt and budgeting advice
3. Help residents to train, gain and remain in employment
4. Promote the expansion of affordable credit options
5. Reduce fuel poverty, increase financial resilience and promote access to bank accounts

The role of the Newcastle Advice Compact
To Advice Compact aims to develop agreed, coordinated approaches to the delivery and development of advice services that directly support residents and also provides secondary support to non-specialist agencies.

The Newcastle Advice Compact helped 19,664 people in 2013 – 14 with debt and benefits advice; this included securing £21,902,716 of unclaimed benefits and preventing 4,529 cases of homelessness.

The Advice Compact meets monthly and covers the following areas:
- targeting and take up campaigns
- communications
- performance management
- training
- funding applications
- volunteering
- good practice sharing
- information sharing

Membership
The members are the following agencies that provide not for profit information and advice:

- Active Inclusion Newcastle
- Newcastle Warmzone
- Revenues and Benefits
- Newcastle CAB
- Search Project
- Shelter
- Places for People
- Jobcentre Plus
- Clean Slate CIC
- Newcastle Futures
- Newcastle Law Centre
- Disability North

- Newcastle University
- Fairer Housing Unit
- Moneywise Credit Union
- Guinness Trust
The work of the Advice Compact is coordinated by Active Inclusion Newcastle (AIN) that facilitates partners to work together at the following levels:

- Primary prevention activities – To facilitate making preventing crises “everybody’s business”. This provides information, briefings, toolkits and consultancy support to partners that are not specialists in housing, welfare rights, debt or employment.

- Secondary prevention activities – At the core of the model are direct specialist information, advice and accommodation services.

- Crisis activities – These services support people when community and preventative support fails to prevent crises. These acute services support people facing destitution.

The Advice Compact provides the direct specialist services that meet the needs described above, this happens in the following context:

Understand local impact – what we need to do for Newcastle residents
- Quarterly reviews for homelessness, financial inclusion, welfare rights, debt, migration and asylum; aligning quantitative and qualitative information; incorporating feedback loops and exception reporting to learn from every crisis that we fail to prevent

Align budget processes to support the most vulnerable
- AIN and the services commissioned through the Crisis Response budget
- Resource allocation – the Newcastle Gateway

Develop citywide consensus and partnership responses – governance / strategy
- Financial Inclusion Group / Newcastle Advice Compact – Newcastle’s Approach to Financial Inclusion
- Cross Council Migration Group

Target support to protect the most vulnerable and to prevent crisis
- Housing, debt and welfare rights advice, floating support and accommodation
- The AIN matrix and spectrum of advice

Provide universal information and advice to prevent people becoming vulnerable
- The AIN “offer” – briefings, trigger point conversations, training and website

Monitor and review the above with partners to create continuous improvement
- Quarterly reviews for homelessness, financial inclusion, welfare rights, debt, migration and asylum; aligning quantitative and qualitative information; incorporating feedback loops and exception reporting to learn from every crisis that we fail to prevent
Consider the individual and structural causes of crisis – identifying the balance of the obstacles to individuals’ inclusion and the structural causes of those obstacles

More information on homelessness can be found financial inclusion here.
